Israel Press Reports Refusal Of a U.S. Plan to Open Canal

TEL AVIV, March 29 (UPI)—Two Israeli newspapers said today the government will not agree to a partial pullback from the Suez Canal as part of the U.S. plan to reopen the waterway until Egypt ends its state of belligerence.

The Jerusalem Post and Ma'ariv carried the reports as the latest American proposal, presented by Assistant Secretary of State Joseph P. Sisco, moved to the fore in Middle East diplomatic maneuvers.

Ma'ariv said Defense Ministry experts were examining the U.S. plan calling for an Israeli pullback from the canal in exchange for its reopening.

"Israel would consider proposals for the opening of the Suez Canal only if a partial agreement with Egypt could bring about a formal termination of the state of belligerence and on the condition that any moves toward a military disengagement on the canal front are mutual," the Post said.

Workers Back Concorde

PARIS, March 29 (WP)—"It is symptomatic," said the Communist party daily, L'Humanite, this morning, "that it should be the workers and their organizations who are deliberately taking up the defense of the Concorde."

L'Humanite was commenting, with enthusiasm, on an open letter defending the aircraft that was issued last night by aerospace unions of the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor.

The CGT letter said that Mr. Servan-Schreiber's attempt to oppose Concorde to domestic social needs was "political dishonesty and pure demagoguery."

The CGT letter was directed to Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, Radical party deputy from Nancy, who earlier this month attacked the Concorde as an "industrial Vietnam."

Jarring, Riad Meet in Paris Over Mideast

UN Envoy Returning To Post in Moscow

By James Goldborough PARIS, March 29.—United Nations peace intermediary Gunnar V. Jarring met for nearly two hours today with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad to discuss the deadlock in Middle East peace talks.

Mr. Jarring had little to say following the surprise visit other than that he would soon return to Moscow, where he is Swedish ambassador. An Egyptian spokesman, however, said that Mr. Jarring was ready to return to UN headquarters in New York as soon as he received an Israeli answer to his Feb. 8 peace memorandum.

The spokesman, Egyptian UN Ambassador Mohammed Hassan el-Zayyat, told reporters that Mr. Jarring "had nothing to ask us and nothing to propose to us."

Mr. Jarring said the Swedish diplomat regarded the Egyptian response to the memorandum as "positive."

Everything for Success "I am sure," said Mr. el-Zayyat, "that he (Gunnar Jarring) will leave Moscow even on Easter if he receives an answer from Israel, because we know he is ready to sacrifice everything for the success of his mission."

The Egyptian spokesman said that today's meeting had not been expected, but added that it was natural for Mr. Jarring to visit in a positive way as he did.

Mr. Riad is here for a conference of top-level Egyptian diplomats to inform them of the deadlock so they in turn can inform their host governments of the Egyptian position.

Earlier today, Mr. Riad warned French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann that Israel was creating a serious situation in the Middle East.

French sources said that the Egyptian foreign minister emphasized the danger of new fighting if the deadlock was not broken.

VATICAN VISITOR—Yugoslav President Tito and Pope Paul VI during their official conference yesterday.

Tito Presses Arab Viewpoint On Mideast in Talk With Pope

By Paul Hofmann ROME, March 29 (NYT)—President Tito of Yugoslavia and Pope Paul VI discussed the Middle East, East-West affairs and other international problems today.

Churchmen said later that the Yugoslav leader made a strong presentation of the Arab case in the Middle East conflict.

Mr. Tito, who ended a five-day visit to Italy today, conferred with the Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad near Pisa on Saturday.

Pope Paul reportedly restated the Vatican's request for an international, guaranteed, special status for Jerusalem and other holy places in Palestine.

For today's occasion, the Vatican, for the first time in its history, displayed the Communist red star—an emblem of Yugoslavia's blue-white-red flag flown atop buildings and poles in the small papal state.

Mr. Tito was the first Communist chief of state to pay an official call on the head of the Roman Catholic Church. A visit by Soviet President Nikolai S. Podgorny in 1967 was described as private.

Interpreters Present Only interpreters were present while Pope Paul and Mr. Tito conferred in the Pope's private library in the Vatican's Apostolic Palace.

Mr. Tito then delivered an address stressing that Yugoslavia had a vital interest in the establishment of lasting peace in Europe and in the Mediterranean area.

"It is therefore understandable that we devote special attention to the crisis in the Middle East and to the grave dangers inherent in it," the Yugoslav president said.

Mr. Tito also voiced concern about recent developments in Southeast Asia and Africa. He said the views of Yugoslavia and the Vatican on the major international problems were "close or identical" and expressed the hope that their relations may continue to develop favorably.

In his reply, Pope Paul, speaking in Italian, professed "respect and affectionate esteem" for Yugoslavia, with its many Roman Catholics. Recalling that Yugoslav peoples had often undergone trials and adversities, the Pope remarked that their vocation was to be a bridge between different and often conflicting cultures.

Pope Paul noted that, under President Tito's guidance, Yugoslavia had extended its international influence even outside Europe and praised what he termed his visitor's efforts for peace and better international understanding.

The Pope said that he, too, hoped that the collaboration between the Vatican and Yugoslavia would become increasingly close. He made no direct reference to the Middle East situation in his public reply.

Mr. Tito was born into the Roman Catholic Church. Today's audience indicated that the relations between his Communist government and the Vatican had come full circle since 1948 when the Most Rev. Aloysius Stepinac, archbishop of Zagreb and later a cardinal, was sentenced to 16 years in prison on charges of collaboration with the Fascist government of Croatia's wartime dictator, Ante Pavelic.

Pope Pius XII excommunicated Capt. Medina "stated that there was no innocent civilians in Pinkville or My Lai, that either they were Viet Cong, or VC sympathizers, that the village should be destroyed and all living things in it," said Elmer Hayward, a 23-year-old oil worker from Baytown, Texas. "To me, it meant everyone."

Five of those witnesses, including Lt. Calley, remembered that someone asked the captain a question at the briefing—what should they do with women and children?

Capt. Medina replied, according to Tommy Moss, of Spartanburg,

The U.S. command also launched another helicopter shot. The number of helicopters destroyed in the operation that began Feb. 8. All aboard were rescued except one American crewman who was reported injured.

In Laos, the government lifted more reinforcements and embattled Luang Prabang and consolidated defense lines about six miles northeast of the capital, military sources said in Vietnam.

The sources said there now are some six battalions of government forces round the city, totaling an estimated seven battalions of Communist.

Western officers said there appeared to be no direct threat to the city but they said that it is to be better defended than some days or possibly weeks.

In Cambodia, two American and Cambodian troops were wounded on the front line of Highway 4 about 30 miles southwest of Phnom Penh today.

They were Joseph Lee, a cameraman for Vietnam Television, and Teo Khao Heng, a Cambodian freelance photographer.

Mr. Lee, who was released after two weeks in Communist captivity last December, was shot through the left hand. Mr. Heng suffered bullet wounds in the shoulder and left leg.

Death Sentence Possible Calley Found Guilty of My Lai Killings

(Continued from Page 1) S.C. "There was not to be anyone alive in the village." The Army prosecution offered a string of witnesses to refute the denial of Capt. Medina's briefing, but none went as far as the captain himself, who insisted on the witness stand that he told his troops to "use your common sense" and not to shoot at women and children unless they shot first.

To explain Lt. Calley's plea that he was only following orders, two psychiatrists testified in his defense, describing the lieutenant as "mentally impaired" by fear and combat stress on the day of the slaying. They analyzed the plea, Calley's defense lawyer, Gen. Talbot, said Medina's plea was legal or illegal.

The Army prosecutor argued, first, that Capt. Medina never gave an order to kill everything in a "containing" which doesn't fit with the Army prosecution which will try Capt. Medina at Ft. Monmouth. In any case, the prosecutor argued, Lt. Calley should have known an order to kill unresisting captives was illegal and must not be obeyed.

To support that, Capt. Daniel repeatedly asked the ex-infantrymen who were witnesses why, if Capt. Medina ordered it, they didn't join in the wholesale killing.

"I didn't have no reason to shoot," Mr. Hayward explained. "They wasn't doing anything to me."

James Dursi, a phone installer from Brooklyn, remembered, "I couldn't go through with it. These were defenseless men, women and kids." He and others refused to fire.

But the bulk of the trial testimony—36 prosecution witnesses—was devoted to what Lt. Calley did at My Lai and the grisly recollections of the men who served under him.

Mr. Lursi described the 70 or more people whom Lt. Calley and other GIs supposedly shot in an irrigation ditch east of the hamlet: "They were diving on top of each other, some of the mothers trying to protect their children."

Charles Hall, a machine-gunner, described the bodies as "very red—it apparently was not old, dried blood."

"It was just a lot of bodies, sir," said Lt. Hugh C. Thompson Jr., a helicopter pilot who saw the

"This showed that ancient Greeks produced steel 2,000 years before the metal was produced in Europe," Mr. Varoukakis said. "The question that now arises is whether or not the process was discovered accidentally," he said.

U.K. to Get Radio Network of 60 Commercial Stations

By John M. Lee

LONDON, March 29 (NYT)—The Conservative government in the American sense are foreseen. The Conservative government, shortly after it took office last June, announced its intentions of permitting commercial radio stations as an alternative service to the BBC. Today's white paper sets out its plans for their organization.

However, a critic from the Labor opposition, Ivor Richard, denounced the plan as "another 60 pop stations" and "a piece of Conservative theology which is designed to try and fulfill an ill-conceived and half-baked pre-selection pledge."

He accused the Conservatives of "putting cash before standard."

ITA to Be Renamed
The government said in the white paper that the commercial radio service would be put under the Independent Television Authority, which will be renamed the Independent Broadcasting Authority, and will regulate commercial radio as it does commercial television.

Rolling three-year contracts, renewable each year, are proposed for the radio program companies. Mr. Chataway said, "a system that will combine strong powers of control for the authority with prospects of greater security of tenure for the companies than can be obtained with short-term contracts."

Mr. Chataway also proposed that local newspapers with a significant circulation in a transmission area would have the right to acquire an interest in the local station. However, critics expressed fears for weekly newspapers which could lose advertising revenues.

Mr. Chataway said the commercial service implied no diminution in BBC services. The 29 local stations of the BBC will be continued as well as the BBC's four national program services, Radio One, Two, Three and Four. The Radio One service, featuring pop music and disc jockeys, is by far the most popular.

VHF Transmission Seen
The purpose of the 60 new stations is to serve recognizable communities. Some commercial advocates have proposed London should have four.

The commercial local radio service is to be transmitted on very high frequencies reaching about 65 percent of the British population; and on medium frequencies reaching about 70 percent of the population by day but only 25 percent by night.

In explaining his decision to proceed with the new radio service, the government said, "It has sometimes seemed that television would almost completely supersede radio. It is now clear that radio has an unmatched flexibility and immediacy which will guarantee it a continuing place as an important medium of communication."

Ulster PM Vows Fairness To Catholics

Defies Party Rightists On Starting Crackdown

BELFAST, March 29 (UPI)—New Prime Minister Brian Faulkner defied Protestant hard-liners in his Unionist party today with a refusal to bear down indiscriminately on Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority.

"The full rigor of the law and its upholders will be used against the terrorists and troublemakers," Mr. Faulkner told the annual meeting of the 900-member Unionist Party Council.

But he said: "Don't look to me if you want a blanket condemnation of any section of the community."

"Let me make it abundantly plain that there are no get-tough-with-Catholics policies in my program. My administration will be scrupulously fair to everyone, under the law."

Mr. Faulkner became prime minister of the British province last Tuesday after Maj. James Chichester-Clark, also a moderate, resigned under pressure of Protestant militant hard-liners, who demanded the government adopt tougher measures against the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Bested Hard-Liner
Mr. Faulkner apparently bested his hard-liner foes in the Unionist council. When William Craig, the right-wing leader, who challenged Mr. Faulkner for the premiership last week, left the meeting hall, he said he would continue to oppose Mr. Faulkner's policies and added: "I have never seen the Unionist council so demoralized."

Mr. Craig himself was the target of an abortive bomb attack today, police said. He discovered the bomb when he returned from the meeting to his home in the Belfast suburb of Annadale and his sons, Colin, 10, and Andrew, 8, showed him a newspaper-wrapped, tape-sealed parcel they had carried in from the garden hedge 20 yards from the house.

"I cut it open and found three sticks of gelignite," Mr. Craig said. "I phoned the police. Army bomb disposal experts took it away."

A search where the parcel was found revealed four inches of burned-out fuse and a detonator, a police spokesman said.

Mr. Craig said he noticed the parcel in the hedge when he left the house for the council meeting "but thought nothing of it at the time."

A few hours before the council met, there was fresh violence. A pre-dawn bomb blast damaged Belfast's St. Malachy's Roman Catholic school club, next to a maternity hospital on the Crumlin Road. No injuries were reported.

Masked Gunmen Net $172,000 in 2 British Homes

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—Masked men with shotguns raided two socially prominent London area homes during the weekend and escaped with $172,000 in loot, police said today.

Saturday night, six men in stocking masks, carrying shotguns, burst into the fashionable Hampstead suburb home of Bernard Delfont, millionaire chief executive of Associated British Picture Corp. and other film companies.

His son, David, 18, arrived moments later to find the intruders had knocked out a friend named Patrick and bound both the friend and the Delfont housekeeper. Mr. and Mrs. Delfont were away for the weekend.

David, too, was tied up and the gunmen locked their three prisoners in a room overnight, fleeing in the morning with $30,000 ($72,000) in jewels, silver and paintings.

The next day four masked men, again with shotguns, broke into the home of Mrs. Hazel Lyon, estranged wife of real estate tycoon Ronald Lyon, in Sunningdale, in the country southwest of London.

The tied up her and the housekeeper and escaped with $20,000 ($48,000) in jewels.

Obituaries Sherman M. Fairchild, 74, Inventor, Aviation Pioneer

NEW YORK, March 29 (NYT).—Sherman Mills Fairchild, 74, a restless inventor with the imagination and personal wealth to develop major industries from his ideas, died yesterday in Roosevelt Hospital here after a long illness.

Mr. Fairchild was active to the end as chairman of Fairchild Camera and Equipment Co., which mainly manufactures semiconductor devices with a wide variety of applications. He also remained chairman of Fairchild Hiller Corp., of which Republic Aviation in Farmingdale, L. I., has been a division for several years.

Mr. Fairchild was a director of International Business Machines Corp., of which he was reputed to be the biggest single shareholder. His father, George W. Fairchild, a founder and first president of the company, left him stock worth $2 million after taxes.

He studied engineering at Columbia but never took a degree. He had been studying the problems of aerial photography, which were of great interest to the War Department in World War I.

In 1918 officials offered him $7,000 to build a camera to their specifications; he met them at a cost of $40,000, with his father making up the difference.

Mr. Fairchild was convinced that his aerial camera had a future. He established his own company in 1920, with his father's backing, rather than starting a career with IBM. He began applying the camera to mapmaking and established his own aerial survey company in 1924. It, too, lost money for years before becoming a highly profitable undertaking.

It was through the survey work that he branched out into aircraft manufacture, to make planes well suited to his mapmaking and charting. Characteristically his first, in 1926, included two technological innovations—an enclosed cabin and folding wings. The next year's model had two more major innovations—hydraulic brakes and landing gear.

His success attracted backers, who planned to make Fairchild Aviation Corp. the "General Motors of aviation," but business reverses and incompatibility led to a breakup of this dream in 1931. For the rest of his career, Mr. Fairchild preferred industries in which his ultimate control was complete, with management of his own choosing.

Gierek Assails Peking's Stance Against Russia

MOSCOW, March 29 (Reuters).

Polish Communist party chief Edward Gierek, writing in Pravda today, accused China of continuing its splitting activity against the Soviet Union.

The article, appearing only a day before the Soviet Communist 24th party Congress opens, was the first phrased in such bitter language to be printed here for a long time.

Observers are still waiting to see how far the party Congress will go in condemning Chinese policies but Mr. Gierek's article could be seen as an indication it will take a tough line.

The Polish party chief wrote that recent attacks on the Soviet party and its allies showed Chinese leaders "have absolutely no intention of departing from their splitting positions."

The Chinese had been especially severe in their attacks on the Soviet Union's draft five-year plan directives, due to be discussed at the Congress, "in which, they apparently see a portent of the failure of their policy and the futility of their splitting actions."

BALLET The Geneva Company 2 Years Later

By Suzanne Massie GENEVA, March 29.—Do look now. An interesting thing is happening on the banks of Lake Geneva at the Grand Théâtre.

He brought with him four leading members of the New York City Ballet: Patricia McBride, Jean-Pierre Bonnefoux, Karin von Aroldingen and Marnee Morris. They were here to perform, for the first time in Europe, the captivating, luring Gershwin work which Balanchine choreographed last year for the New York company.

invited to dance in Iran, Athens, Geneva and Rome. Balanchine's help has been invaluable. He has lent some of his best dancers for guest performances (Arthur Mitchell, Patricia Neary, Kay Mazzo), made his ballets available at reasonable cost, sent teachers and even young dancers from New York.

Two years ago nobody much cared about Geneva as a ballet center. To be sure, the Grand Théâtre had always had a ballet company of sorts, mostly given over to over-stuffed productions of the classics. George Balanchine agreed to help out, appointed Cuban-born, Geneva-raised Alfonso Catá as ballet master and things rapidly began to change.

Conservative Geneva is not yet at all sure how much it wants to spend on this new phenomenon in their midst. When Catá arrived, the company was running at a deficit. By cutting costs he has gotten it back into the black, yet it is difficult for him to convince the management that he needs costumes for new productions. "I told them," he says, "that the next step was nudity." He does not even have a secretary. Catá is intensely loyal to his dancers and they have developed a team spirit. He has done his own choreography for eight operas and four ballets including one for Charles Truett, Yves Montand, Charles Aznavour, Gilbert Bécaud, Jacques Brel and Juliette Gréco can be thought of as musically impoverished only by those who overlook or have forgotten, music's roots in a people's speech.

is finished and people can say, 'I saw a Balanchine creation.' I must have skilled and disciplined dancers. People love to build buildings, put a name on them and not think about what goes on inside. A theater must stand for something definite, culturally and spiritually. Here, the company must have a permanent repertoire which is good and has personality.

Music in London The Eloquence of Juliette Gréco

By Henry Pleasants LONDON, March 29.—"How misguided are the conventional assumptions of music appreciation and music criticism." I reflected while listening to Juliette Gréco Saturday night at the Royal Festival Hall. The talk is forever of the language of music, when what really counts is the music of language.

Italy Christoff Sings Rossini's 'Moses' at Rome Opera

By William Weaver ROME, March 29.—Rossini's serious opera is something of a rarity in opera-house calendars, even in Italy. Usually, when they are performed, it means a special occasion: The presence of Joan Sutherland, for example, if "Semiramide" is to be mounted or the Italian debut of Beverly Sills, which took place two seasons ago at La Scala, with Rossini's "The Siege of Corinth." A staging of "Mose in Egitto" requires, first of all, an impressive bass, and for the current production at the Rome Opera there is Boris Christoff.

FASHION Chanel's Kind of 'Ready-to-Wear'

By Hebe Dorsey PARIS, March 29.—Chanel is branching out into "colifichets"—a polite, cautious word used by Chanel's management to mean ready-to-wear.

The downtown boutique of the fashion house will be enlarged by the end of the year to include ties and sweaters as well as knit and leather suits. "But nothing made of fabric, not to rival the couture line," director Jacqueline Chirouin said, somewhat nervously. The boutique, by the way, is still making a killing with Chanel perfumes, costume jewelry and the famous quilted, gold-chained handbags.

GENEVA, March 29 (AP)—The United Nations survey published today forecasts that economic growth rates in Western Europe will decline in 1971 for the second consecutive year, with increased private consumption carrying most of the rather modest expansion.

Discussions among U.S. government and corporate officials and the British continued today as speculation mounted that some sort of decision was imminent. From the British side, word was that emphasis has shifted to the price of the Rolls engine, and away from British requests for assurances of U.S. government support for the whole Lockheed TriStar program.

THE BUSHWHACKED PIANO

By Thomas McGuane. Simon & Schuster. 220 pp. $5.95. Reviewed by Robert F. Jones

MADNESS, it has been maintained, is a fit subject only for the pathologist. But in a society where madness often seems to be the norm, where culture and counterculture vie with one another to produce the maximum absurdity, the novelist himself a bit of a madman by tradition becomes the pathologist.

His first novel, "The Sporting Club," was set in Hemingway country—the dark woods and white water of Michigan—but its delicious humor was pure Marx Brothers. At McGuane's touch, the somber Hemingway code of grace under pressure exploded like an overcasted Coke bottle under a fusillade of wax bullets and prankish exhibitionism.
